Bobber fishing, also known as float fishing, is a technique where you use a bobber (or float) to suspend your bait at a predetermined depth in the water. The bobber has two main jobs: it signals a bite when a fish takes your bait, and it keeps your bait at the exact depth you want, making it easier to target fish located at specific depths. The beauty of bobber fishing lies in its simplicity and the visual thrill of seeing the bobber dip below the surface when a fish bites.
